Rather than write a 'this is how I do it' chapter, it seems more helpful to get under the skin of surgical techniques used specifically in neuromodulation, so to speak, and try to encapsulate the underlying principles of all surgical aspects in neuromodulation. This could serve as an underlayer, or foundation, upon which details of various techniques, some of which may be delineated here as ...

The short answer: GEL NAILS are an extremely natural-looking enhancement: thin, clear, flexible, non-yellowing, nonporous, resist lifting. Gel nails can be used for natural nail overlays (actually one of the most difficult techniques--but it looks the easiest), tip overlays, and sculpted onto forms for short extensions, and to help encapsulate a damaged free-edge as it grows out.
