The Collected Short Stories. The stories from A Quiver Full of Arrows take us on a tour of ancient heirlooms and modern romance, of cutthroat business and kindly strangers, of lives lived in the realms of power. Fortunes are made and squandered, honour betrayed and redeemed, love lost and rediscovered.

So, I learned on here about a short story collection all about queer teens from different time periods. Naturally, I picked it up from my library the first chance I got. I won't post any spoilers, but I will give a quick blurb on what each story is about, in case anyone was still on the fence about checking it out. All of the stories are good!

I have been a real fan of action western stories for more than 30 years and my favorite western writer is Louis L'Amour. I have read a great number of his books over the years but I had not read this particular collection (The collected short stories of Louis L'Amour Volume 3 Frontier stories, 560 pages) and when I saw it on Amazon for a bargain price I purchased it.

The Collected Short Stories Katherine Mansfield " I don't believe in the human soul. I never have. I believe that people are like portmanteaux - packed with certain things, started going, thrown about, tossed away, dumped down, lost and found, half emptied suddenly, or squeezed fatter than ever, until finally the Ultimate Porter swings them on to the Ultimate Train and away they rattle...

"The Collected Short Stories" by Dana Stabenow. The first one "Nooses Give" is the one that later causes Kate so much trouble. It takes place a little before the first book, "A Cold Day For Murder" and shows a Kate who is both haunted and fierce. The story is told in a stark, matter-of-fact style that is quite chilling.
